Handrails

for all glass balustrades

A huge variety of handrail options are available to you. From stainless steel on the top of the glass or offset from the glass to timber on top or offset.

The design options are limitless.

While a handrail is recommended for added safety and strength allowing for thinner glass it is not a requirement for a handrail to fitted. The design of the glass can be adjusted to increase the strength. Whether its thicker glass, or laminated glass or a different fixing method a solution is available to suit your needs.

We always recommend the installation of a handrail on top of the glass. This handrail provides critical panel to panel support and drastically increases the strength and safety of your balustrade as a whole.

Should any piece of glass break for any reason the handrail will remain held in place by the adjacent panes of glass.

The handrail will stop anyone falling in the event of an accident.
